

St. Andrews Basketball Players Volunteer in Performing Arts Center

St. Andrews Presbyterian College Junior Varsity Basketball players and coach Brandon Williams used their time and muscles for a good cause on Saturday when they helped the Storytelling Arts Center of the Southeast prepare their new space on Main Street. The volunteers disassembled and moved shelving in preparation for new bathroom facilities to be built in the center.

Storytelling Art Center Executive Director Tim Morrissey said, “The basketball players from St. Andrews were a great help to us. We never would have been able to finish this work in one day without their help.”

Players who volunteered to help at the Arts Center were Chris Sumski, Allen Kiefer, Cameron Cofield and Steffan Hollifield. Coach Williams said, “We want our players to become involved in community activities and this was a good way to give back to the generous community that supports St. Andrews in so many ways.”

“This was history in the making,” said Storytelling Arts Center Board Chair, Brenda Gilbert. “For the first time in my memory, Scotland County will have a performing arts center. This was the first of many workdays that will be necessary to prepare this space for future events. St. Andrews has always shared its facilities with the community and it so fitting that on our first day in this new space, we had a group of college students working with us.”
